THE EBENSBURG
NORMAL INSTITUTE
—WILL OPEN—
MAY 8, 1882,
—IN THE—
Union School Building, Ebensburg, Pa.,
UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF
CO. SUP'T L. STRAYER AND CHAS. A. RIDDLE.

First Session of the Ebensburg Normal Institute.

EVERY TEACHER who has risen to the ordinary routine of school work has attended school and by experience mental and physical culture, habits, modes of thought, and attainments, has been enabled to teach with pleasure and satisfaction to himself and with honor to the profession. Those who rise higher do it by mental training; results are accomplished only by study and training of the mind.

It is not lack of talent, time, or money, but the lack of will and determination of purpose which prevents many teachers and young people from attending school.

The public demand educational progress; the profession demands the best talent, the best special preparation possible on the part of teachers. The greatest want of the age is the want of good teachers.

DESIGN.

The design of the Normal Institute is to provide better teachers for Cambria county—to furnish a school for our teachers who are not prepared to attend a State Normal School—to accommodate young men and women who are preparing to teach, and to advance the cause of education.

INSTRUCTION.

Thorough instruction will be given in all branches that students desire to study. Special attention will be paid to the branches named on teachers' certificates, but students who are prepared will be encouraged to take up other studies.

Classes will be organized in Latin, Algebra, Physiology, Book-Keeping, Geometry, Botany, &c. Drawing will receive special attention. Instruction in Vocal Music will also be given.

MODEL SCHOOL.

The Model School will be composed of the pupils of the Ebensburg Public Schools.

The design of the Model School is two-fold; first, to present our students with an example of what a public school should be; and, second, to furnish a place where they may exercise the best methods in use, and learn by trial how to put theory into practice.

Opportunities will be given students to visit the Model School, when they may witness the operation of approved methods, under the supervision of the managers of the school. The County Superintendent will make a specialty of this department.

Teachers will meet twice a week for class criticism and discussion of work, at which times the excellencies and defects of methods will be pointed out, that all may profit thereby.

TERMS, &c.

The Normal Institute will open on Monday, May 8, 1882; length of term, nine weeks. Tuition, for Teachers' Course, $7.00; for Preparatory Course, $5.00.

Good boarding can be secured for $3.00 per week. Students who wish boarding secured before the opening of school should write to either of the undersigned.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Dictionaries, Encyclopedias, and all necessary books of reference, will be at disposal of students.

A Literary Society will be organized, and, in connection with the regular exercises of the school, will afford students fine opportunities for literary culture.

Students are recommended to bring all text-books and other books of reference, as the topical method will be largely used. Students should be in attendance the first day of school. No extra charges for higher studies.

L. STRAYER,
C. A. RIDDLE.

N. B.—It is desirable that students confer with us at their earliest convenience before the school opens. [3-26.-tf.]

WELCOME, SPRING.

Bright and breezy, brave and clear,
Strong new life in every vein,
March begins the rolling year,
Starts anew the wild refrain:
Hark! the cool winds fresher blow,
Hark! the clear streams freer flow;
Hark! the birds exultant sing—
Welcome, Spring!

Moist and brown the naked sod,
Quick'ning to an olive green,
Streaked with snow, that lingers still
Where the sheltering fences lean;
Higher, lines of trees that stand
Stiff and bare, on either hand,
Murmuring, as they rock and swing—
Welcome, Spring!

On the blue hills far away,
Hazy dreams of distance lie,
While white drifts of cloudland float
O'er a clear and wind-blown sky.
In the air a subtle power,
Faint, sweet breath of leaf and flower,
Thro' the damp mold whispering—
Welcome, Spring!

Once released from Winter's spell,
Once his icy reign is o'er,
Shall our eager hearts rebel,
Dashed against his desert shore?
Nay, for once the germ possessed,
Ours, in truth, are all the rest,
Flower and fruitage Time shall bring—
Welcome, Spring!

Bright and breezy, brave and clear,
Strong new life in every vein,
March begins the rolling year,
Starts anew the wild refrain:
Hark! the cool winds fresher blow;
Hark! the clear streams freer flow;
Hark! the birds exultant sing—
Welcome, Spring!

THE CONVICT'S CHILD.

A TRUE AND DEEPLY AFFECTING STORY.

It was early morning.

"Is this the way, sir, to Sing-Sing?"

"Yes," roughly replied a broad-faced countryman, and passed on.

It was afternoon. The child was somewhat fragile in her appearance. Her bonnet was of broken straw; her shoes were much torn, and the sun played hotly on her forehead. She walked on and on an hour longer.

"Is this the way to Sing-Sing, sir?"

"Yes, little girl, but what are you going there for?"

The child trudged on, her lips quivering, but not deigning to answer the pleasant-faced old man who had stopped the jogging of his horse to note her hurried manner, and who liked that little face, anxious and sad as its expression was.

The dew was falling. Kate had fallen, too, almost. A rough stone by the way, imbedded in moss, received her tired little frame. She looked so worn and tired, sitting there, her tangled hair falling on her hands that were clasped over her face. By the shaking of her frame the tears were coming, too, and she was bravely trying to hold them back.

"Why, what is the dear little girl doing here?" The exclamation came from a pair of young lips.

"A curiosity, I declare!" exclaimed a harsher voice, and Katie, looking up suddenly, cowered away from the sight of the young lady and her agreeable looking companion.

"Whatever are you doing here, little girl?" asked Nell Maywood, moving a little nearer towards the frightened child.

"Going. Miss, to Sing-Sing," said Katie.

"Why, George! this child is going to Sing-Sing—ten miles off. Child! did you know it was so far off?"

Katie shook her head, and wiped away the hot and heavy tears, one by one.

"Why, you little goose, what are you going to Sing-Sing for? Have you had your supper?"

Katie shook her head.

"Have you had any dinner?"

Again the child shook her head.

"No dinner. Why, George, the poor thing must be almost starved!"

"I should think so," mechanically replied her brother, just recovering from a yawn, and showing signs of sympathy.

"Look here, what's your name? Well, girl, you must come up to the house and get something to eat. Follow me, and we'll take care of you to-night somehow, and see about your going to Sing-Sing to-morrow."

Katie followed. What a glorious vision burst upon her view! The palatial house; the rocks reddening in the low western sun; the shining river; the signs of luxury on every hand.

"Susan, give this child a good supper; she is hungry, and tired, too, I imagine. After that I will see what can be done for her."

Susan wore a mild face. She looked kindly down at the poor tired little one, and taking her hand, which trembled now, led her into the kitchen.

Meanwhile her story or that brief part of it which we know, was being told in the drawing room. The sylph-like figure in white, lounging gracefully in the midst of delicate cushions, accompanied her narration with expressive gestures, and now and then a little laugh.

"I should like to know what she is going to Sing-Sing for!" she said, leaning languidly back. "We must look her up something to wear—a bonnet, a pair of shoes, and then maybe we can manage to have her carried some distance. Oh! such an odd little thing."

"Who is that, my little daughter?"

"Oh, papa, you are come home! Why, I was talking about a little mite of a child; she can't be more than ten, if that. I saw her out here sitting on a moss rock, the most forlorn object. She says she is going to Sing-Sing."

"I met her on my way," said the pleasant faced old man, "she asked me about it, and I would have stopped her, but she trudged on. Where is she? It was noon when I saw her."

"In the kitchen, papa. Susan is taking good care of her, I think, and when she has had a hearty supper we will talk with her."

A gay trio of young girls came in. The nettings were put up, the gas was burning brightly, and music and mirth banished all thoughts of care. Suddenly Nell Maywood remembered the odd little figure, and clapping her hands, cried, "Oh, I've something to show you, girls!" and disappeared.

Susan was picking gooseberries near the pantry in the kitchen.

"Where is the child, Susie?" asked Nell Maywood.

"On the doorstep, Miss."

"Why, no, Susan, there's nobody to be seen."

"No! Miss." Susan placed her pan down, held her apron up to catch the stems of the berries and walked deliberately to the door.

"Why, she sat there some time after supper. I turned and came in; she was sitting there, looking up, up at the stars, I expect. I thought she was a mighty quiet child, but she's deep, deep, Miss Nelly; she's gone. Let me see, there ain't any silver around—I should be afeard she'd took something; they are mighty artful."

"Why, didn't you tell her she might stay all night?" Nell Maywood was peeping here and there to spy her if possible.

"Yes, Miss Nell, and told her what a good bed there was over the wood shed; but she looked strange out of them large eyes of hers."

"The poor child is in trouble," said Nell, quite sorrowful that she could not further relieve her necessities. "I'd have given her something to wear, and we could have sent her to Sing-Sing. But perhaps she will come back again—if so, will you send her to me?"

"If she do, I will, Miss," answered Susan, going at the gooseberries again.

But little Katie did not come back. She had been watching her opportunity to get off, and had already been gone some time. She slept in an open field, crawling in some hay

EBENSBURG, PA.,
FRIDAY, - - - - MAY 5, 1882.

CAMERON'S State convention will meet at Harrisburg on Wednesday of next week.

PARNELL, Dillon and O'Kelly, all of whom are members of Parliament from Ireland, were discharged from Kilmainham jail by order of the English government on Tuesday last. There was great rejoicing over their release.

THE loss to the Republican party in Ohio owing to the recent liquor laws enacted by the Legislature of that State, is estimated by some of the leading Republican papers at not less than forty thousand votes. This is somewhat curious when it is recollected that a favorite Republican argument against the the Democracy is that that party contains the entire Sunday breaking and liquor-selling element of the population all over the country.

CONGRESSMAN MORGAN R. WISE published a card in the Greensburg papers last week, stating that he wouldn't be a candidate for a third term at the coming primary elections in Westmoreland county. If Morgan R. will now publish another card announcing that he will not be a candidate in either Fayette or Greene, the other two counties in the district, he will then by common consent be regarded as wise in his conduct as he is in his name.

A CHANGE in the office of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland has taken place, Earl Cowper retiring and Earl Spencer taking his place. The latter filled the position not many years ago, and was very popular with the Irish people, while on the other hand it is admitted that Cowper has been a complete failure. The belief in England now is that the government has decided to release all the men at present confined in Irish jails for opposition to the land act, except those who were arrested on suspicion of being personally concerned in the commission of outrages.

THE Pittsburg Telegraph, referring to a recent hanging by a mob at Galion, Ohio, of a negro who had outraged the person of a mere child, and also commenting on the alarming frequency of the commission of that hellish offence in so many sections of the country, expresses the conviction that the dread penalty should be inflicted first, last and all the time for the malicious and forcible violation of female chastity. The Telegraph is right, for if the man who commit murder deserves to be hung, the safety of society demands the same atonement for the other and scarcely less heinous crime.

IF the constitutionality of repudiating a portion of the State debt of Virginia ever gets before the Supreme Court of the United States, as it most certainly will if Mahone succeeds in his purpose, what the decision will be has just been substantially determined by that Court in compelling New Orleans to pay four millions of bonds which had been scaled or readjusted, by an act of the Louisiana Legislature in 1876. The unanimous opinion of the Court was summed up as follows: "Legislation of a State thus impairing the obligation of a contract made under its authority is null and void, and the Courts, in enforcing the contract, will pursue the same course and apply the same remedies as though such invalid legislation had never existed." Certain holders of Virginia bonds, which have been "scaled" by Mahone's Legislature have now, as we remember, a suit on the way to the Supreme Court, which will be covered by the decision above quoted.

LAST Monday was another field day in the House at Washington for opening the flood-gates of wild extravagance and log-rolling jobbery in making appropriations of the people's money for the erection of public buildings. Bills were passed aggregating nearly two millions of dollars for building postoffices at Denver, Detroit, Council Bluffs, Peoria, Lynchburg and Greensboro' in North Carolina, when Mr. Randall and other Democrats called a halt and the House agreed to stop there for the present. When this kind of legislation, three-fourths of which is inexcusable plunder of the treasury, gets started on Monday, which is the only day it has much of a chance, it is a very difficult thing to stop it, since it has supporters from almost every State whose combined vote is irresistible. It is estimated that it will require at least twenty millions of dollars to cover bills of this nature, if all the appropriations asked for should pass. The only way to put an end to such gigantic stealing is to repeal all the internal revenue tax laws, and thus prevent a large surplus from accumulating in the treasury.

FIVE Independent Republicans, so-called, with Wolfe at their head, and five "machine' Republicans, with Quay as their captain, held a conference at the Continental Hotel, Philadelphia, on last Saturday night and finished their their work on Monday night. The purpose of the conference was to harmonize the existing differences and dissensions between the two warring factions of the grand old party in this State. That object don't seem to have been accomplished, however, as both Wolfe and McKee, chairman of the Independent Republican State Committee, admitted after it was all over that the resolutions adopted would amount to "probably nothing." It is not pretended that the action of the conference is binding upon the house of Wolfe or upon the house of Cameron, the latter of which was represented in the conference by Quay. The resolutions adopted will be submitted to the Republican State convention when it meets on Wednesday next, and will, of course, be adopted. They are in substance, an admission by the Cameron men that they have played it very rough on Wolfe and his innocents in the past, but promising to do the nice thing by them in the future. Next Wednesday's convention will simplify the matter materially.

IN the course of Blaine's examination last week before the Peru-Chili investigating committee regarding his dispatches as Secretary of State to Gen. Hurlbut, U. S. Minister to the first named country, he saw fit in his usual bluster and bravado style to use the expression, "the dirty Democratic press." It was a misnomer, because it is not the Democratic press that has attacked Blaine's peculiar methods of diplomacy, but the leading organs of the Republican party—such papers, for instance, is the New York Times, Commercial Advertiser and Post, as well as other well known Republican papers throughout the country Mr. Blaine, however, ought to be very chary in his use of the word "dirty," in his application of it to the Democratic newspapers, His letters in the possession of Mulligan, but not all of them written to him, which he borrowed from Mulligan just before the Cincinnati convention met in 1876 and refused to return, are not forgotten. One of them, addressed to a railroad man named Fisher, related to a decision he (Blaine) had given in 1869 as Speaker of the House, when the bill to extend the land-grant of the Little Rock and Fort Smith road was pending before that body, and the way he was rewarded for it. The Caldwell referred to in the letter, which we publish below, was Isaiah Caldwell of Boston, President of the road referred to. We ask any man who reads this letter, and reflects upon the circumstances under which it was written, to say whether the word "dirty" is not a fit adjective with which to describe James G. Blaine's official conduct in regard to his service to the railroad company, as he himself narrates it. This is what he wrote to Fisher:

"I inclose a part of the Congressional Globe of April 9, containing the point to which I referred at some length to my previous letter of to-day. You will find it of interest to read it over and see what a narrow escape your bill made on that last night of the session. Of course it was my plain duty to make the ruling when the point was once raised. If the Arkansas men had not, however, happened to come to me when at their wits' end and in despair, the bill would undoubtedly have been lost or at least postponed for a year. I thought the point would interest both you and Caldwell, though occurring before either of you engaged in the enterprise. I beg you to understand that I thoroughly appreciate the courtesy with which you have treated me in this railroad matter; but your conduct towards me in business matters has always been marked by unbounded liberality in past years and, of course, I have naturally come to the conclusion to expect the same of you now. You urge me to make as much as I fairly can out of the arrangement into which we have entered. It is natural that I should do the utmost to this end. I am bothered by only one thing, and that is definite and expressed arrangement with Mr. Caldwell. I am anxious to acquire the interest he has promised me, but I do not get a definite understanding with him as I have with you."

THE new anti-Chinese bill, which passed the House soon after the President vetoed the first bill, passed the Senate on Friday last by a vote of 23 yeas to 15 nays, eighteen Senators, nine in favor of its passage and nine opposed to it, being paired. The fifteen votes against the bill were all given by Republicans, and the thirty-two in its favor were all cast by Democrats, with the exception of the four votes of the Republican Senators from Colorado, California and Nevada, and four votes of Republican Senators from other States. The only substantial difference, if it is substantial, between this bill and the vetoed bill, is that the last one suspends Chinese immigration for a period of ten years, instead of twenty, as provided for in the original measure. There are conflicting opinions at Washington as to whether Mr. Arthur will approve the bill or kill it with another veto. On the day before the bill passed the Senate an anti-Chinese convention was held in San Francisco and a scheme adopted to divide the Pacific coast into districts, which shall be notified to remove the Chinese within a specified time, and on failure to do so the district shall be proclaimed dangerous. If they are still harbored in the district, the anti-Chinese League will then proceed to remove them by force until the country is rid of them. However desirous the people of California may be to clear that State of its present Chinese inhabitants, it must be remembered that they landed there under the solemn sanction of the well-known Burlingame treaty between this country and China, and that any attempt to expel them in the manner proposed would involve those who undertake it in very serious difficulties.

THE contest for the seat of Congressman Chalmers, of Mississippi, was ended on Saturday last by the admission of Lynch, the colored contestent. Chalmers, according to the returns, received a majority of 3,779 votes, but the Republican Committee on lections, by a process peculiarly their own, arrived at the conclusion that Lynch was elected by a majority of 375. The theory of the Committee seems to have been that Lynch lived in a district largely composed of negroes, and therefore Republicans, and that if he wasn't successful he should have been. Gen. Chalmers has now been elected to Congress three times in succession, and each time he has been charged by the Northern Republican press with having really been defeated, and of occuppying a seat to which another had been elected, just as Hayes for four years occupied Tilden's place without any complaint from these same organs of the "God and morality" party, Chalmers has always denied the truth of the charge, and if the Vicksburg district has not been changed let Lynch and Chalmers try it over next November, and that will end the long controversy.

THE people of Philadelphia propose celebrating an important and interesting event next October. On the 11th of September, 1682, one hundred passengers, including William Penn, embarked at Deal, England, in the ship "Welcome" for this land of promise. Penn arrived at New Castle, on the Deleware, on October 27th—remaining there one day—arrived at Upland (now Chester) on the 29th, and landed at what is now Philadelphia probably, on October 30th, but certainly before November 2d, 1862, It is to be hoped that this celebration in honor of the good and peaceful Quaker, by whom the foundation of our noble commonwealth was laid two hundred years ago, will be carried out in such a way by those having it in charge as to be eminently worthy of the occasion.

OUR PHILADELPHIA LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA, May 1, 1882.

[Regular Correspondence of THE FREEMAN.]

DEAR HENRY—On the first day of May, the anniversary of the Apostles Philip and James (a feast of obligation), when my mind should be otherwise engrossed, I cannot divest it of the regret entertained on account of the unfortunate circumstance that Mr. Blaine was not permitted to tell the country all he knew about the Peruvian guano business. How interesting it would have been to have learned from Mr. B.'s own lips the way the English bond holders of Peru instigated Chili to make war, and all about the English government's fleet of iron clads, which were kept on the coast for the purpose of sustaining the foul conspiracy. How very interesting it would have been had Mr. Blaine been permitted to make these disclosures. O, what a pity! The public has great reason to regret that the altercation betwixt Blaine and Belmont brought to a sudden close the ex-Secretary's diplomatic revelations. There is always something occurring to mar our happiness. Besides this trouble, I have great anxiety of mind in regard to the final result of the Republican conference to be held in this city to-night. I recognize and fear the great dangers which surround the Republican party of Pennsylvania and menace its future supremacy. The conference held in this city on Saturday last between the two wings of the Republican party led to no practical result. Let us hope that the conference to-night may conceive a satisfactory plan of adjustment on which the Republicans of Pennsylvania may be united?

THE NEXT DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE.

It has been suggested that Geo. McGowan be made the chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and the suggestion is a wise one. For many years in Pennsylvania the Democratic campaigns have been halting and limping ones, which crippled themselves at every corner, and it is to be hoped that the blunderings of the Democratic leaders in past campaigns will be effective in bringing to the front new forces and new leaders. Let the machinery of the organization be put in good control. If there is to be a successful Democratic campaign in Pennsylvania this year it will require the services of our best political workers. The Democracy of Pennsylvania wants a chairman of the State committee with good organizing powers—one who possesses the requisite skill and zeal to develop the party's full strength in the coming State conflict—and the party to-day has no man who possesses to a greater degree the requisite skill, knowledge and zeal for the work than George McGowan. He is one of the best organizers in the State and the most active Democrat in this city. He has more than once carried the party to victory in Philadelphia by his own energy and sagacity. Let George McGowan take the helm of the Democratic vessel.

WHERE ARE THE WHITE PREACHERS?

Can it be possible that the white preachers and priests of Washington believe that Guiteau is so afflicted by his Maker that he has not reason to comprehend the plan of salvation offered to all sinners. Even Beecher, who has braved public opinion for years, is afraid to administer to a soul drifting on the verge of eternity. Guiteau was a disciple of Beecher, and in his tabernacle sat under the drippings of the sanctuary, and although he is in distress nigh unto death, Beecher has not been to see and pray for him. For months Guiteau has walked his cell in sight of the gibbet, and no man of God, save one, has gone to offer him the consolation of religion: and this man, to his great and enduring credit be it said, is a negro. Have the preachers of the land, like politicians, come to fear the mob? Has man made a code of morals which can bar any creature from the benefit of the clergy? Where are the white preachers of Washington, the capital city of a Christian nation?

WASHINGTON'S ATMOSPHERE DEMORALIZING.

There is something dreadfully demoralizing in the Washington atmosphere. In the great capital of the nation there is a mawkish sentimentality that attaches to the meanest and vilest thieves. Dishonesty and vice seem to be peculiar to the climate of Washington city.—Sympathy for thieves in that city is a common thing. It is there greatest sympathy is felt for the public thief, Howgate. A great deal of money he stole from the Government he spent upon a class of people who make public opinion. He kept a yacht and a mistress, and enjoyed perfect immunity from public criticism for the one by the free use of the other. He left his wife to earn her own living and showered gold upon his mistress. He fitted up for her a perfect model of a house and kept her in luxury, while his course toward his family was despicable. Should Howgate, notwithstanding, return, and be tried, convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary, he would at once receive executive clemency, come back to Washington, ignore his wife, cleave to his mistress, and enjoy his old society, as does the Government thief, ex-Paymaster Hodge. Paymaster Hodge robbed the Government of half a million of dollars, was tried, convicted and sentenced, but was soon freed from confinement and champagne, and returned to Washington and was at once surrounded by the same circle of society that worshipped pleasure with him before he became a nomiual convict, and was at once given a responible financial trust for the Washington city government. There is something demoralizing in the Washington atmosphere that creates public sentiment for men of such character as Major Hodge and Captain Howgate.

A WASHINGTON JURY.

The verdict of the Washington jury awarding damages in the case of Hallet Kilbourn is another proof of Washington's demoralizing atmosphere. The damages awarded are excessive, exorbitant and outrageous. The verdict was contrary to the evidence and the law.—A jury composed only of such men as sympathize with thieves like Hodge and Howgate could deliberately estimate that the confinement of such an infamous, contumacious witness as Hallet Kilbourn for a period of forty days, would entitle him to reparation in the sum of $100,000. That verdict of itself betrays a dreadfully demoralizing atmosphere in Washington.

RESTORING THE GROG ALLOWANCE.

Now that Billy Chandler commands the Navy, a fellow feeling will cause him to restore the grog allowance cut off under Hayes' cold tea administration. Billy will not venture out on the ocean, as the sight of so much water at once would make his head swim. He will therefore content himself with commanding the Navy from a private room at Welcker's, or from the White House wine cellar. Chandler in the Cabinet, Allunde Joe on the Supreme Bench, all the visiting statesmen provided for, Hayes rich and retired, "Betty and the baby" getting rich, Belknap and Robeson fat and hearty, Badeau in clover, Colfax smiling, Howgate gone, and Guiteau unhung! Great is the Republican party.!

CONSUMPTION.

To prevent night sweats, to ease the cough and arrest emaciation and decline, no other form of malt or medicine can possibly equal MALT BITTERS. This original Nutrient and Tonic is rich in strength and nourishment. It tides the patient over the most critical stages of the disease, digests and assimilates food, enriches and purifies the blood. It builds up the system by stimulating into new life the entire process of digestion.

ABOUT STRIKES AND STRIKERS.

Probably the prime cause of the uneasiness of laboring men which is manifesting itself in various parts of the country is the increased cost of living. It is a reasonable effort upon the part of workingmen that they should try to keep a reciprocal proportion between their earnings and their expenses. But they are bound to exercise good judgement in the premises. The increase in the cost of food has not resulted from any cause within the control of capital or labor. It cannot be remedied by strikes on the part of the workingmen or stoppages on the part of the employers. It is a hardship that bears with uniform pressure upon every active interest in the whole country. The remedy must come from an increased surplus of food products. The existing active demand and high prices will insure a proper supply as soon as the farmers can go through their necessary round of plowing and sowing and reaping. The prospects of fair crops gives every reason to hope for cheaper bread and meat in the due order of production. But the day of relief cannot be hastened by force or tumult. A strike is no remedy for dear bread. It only makes the bread harded to get. The matter might be different if a striker could stop eating; but he merely stops working, the eating must go on.

But there are disabilities under which laborers suffer that are in a measure of their own making, and for which they have in their hands a certain remedy. The tomnoddies who go about organizing disaffections in mines, manufactories and workshops do not look beyond their noses for the permanent burdens which in this country have been so fitted to the backs of labor that they seem to belong their as much as his hump belongs to the camel. They do not reflect that the piled-up millions of gold and silver in the Treasury of the United States in excess of the necessary expenditures of the Government do not represent a huge and unnecessary draft upon the workings of labor. Every shirt on the back of the laboring man, every tool in his hand, his bread, his meat, his clothing, his sugar, his salt, have all been taxed beyond any occasion of necessity to perpetuate a system of spoliation. If the workingman pays on an average 50 per cent. more than he should pay upon nearly all the necessaries of life it is his own fault. He makes the bed he lies on. He has the sort of government he provides for himself, and when he desires to change it he can do so. If there is to be any striking done this year it should be a strike against high taxes, that are eating the very life out of every productive interest.—Philadelphia Record.

HANGED FOR SIX HOURS.—A Mexican by the name of Senobio Martinez was brought to this city yesterday morning from the Medina county, who had a thrilling tale of terror to tell rivalling some of the desperate acts of the Baxter county Vigilance Committee in it palmiest days, when Mexican horse thieves might be seen hanging from the limbs of adjacent trees on almost any day in the week. During those days, too, several well-known gentlemen were accused of going to church with ropes in their pockets. But to the subject, as far as we could glean, Senobio Matinez's story runs about thusly: He lives on the Medina, and for a long time past has concurred the displeasure of his neighbors from the fact that Senobio has been suspected of appropriating other people's horse flesh to his own use, and disposing of the same for private gain. On Tuesday night a mob of unknown men went to the house of Martinez, took him away and hung him to a tree, leaving him dangling afoward for dead. The mob, however, neglected to tie the man's hands behind his back, and by holding the rope about his neck with both hands for six hours, he succeeded in saving his life, and was cut down the next day by friends. The poor fellow cannot tell who the parties were who committed this outrage, nor how many there were in the gang. He only knows that he went through the horrors of death and is still bruised about his face and neck. He was brought to this city, and is now out on the Alazen creek, near town, with friends. An application was made to have him sent to the poorhouse for proper care and treatment, Judge Felix G. Smith granted the request, but the man refused to go, fearing that the mob would hunt him there and accomplish their foul purpose.—San Antonio Express

A MONSTER LOCOMOTIVE.—The new sixty-ton engine of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has been christened "Jumbo" by the employes of the corporation. This mammoth in the way of mechanism weighs over sixty tons, and is fifteen tons heavier than a class "K" engine, the largest in use heretofore. It has a five feet driving wheel, with a thirty-three inch truck under the smokestack. In the rear of the drivers there is one six-wheel swivel truck which will enable the engine to turn a sharp curve. The cylinder is 18x24, the same size as is used on class "K" engines. The water tank, which surrounds the fire box, has a capacity of 2,000 gallons. The engine is constructed to ran in either direction, and has pilots at both ends, thus doing away with the necessity of a turn-table. The iron horse is in one solid frame, and while shorter than other engines is three feet higher. Hard or soft coal may be used, and the fire box is eight feet deep. The engine virtually reverses itself, this movement being obtained by the use of hot water instead of steam. The injector checks enter the boiler behind the dome, thus protecting the pipe in case of accident. 'Jumbo' made the run from Altoona to this city, drawing fifteen freight cars, some parts of the trip being made at the rate of a mile in 29 seconds. The engine is the invention of Theodore N. Ely, superintendent of motive power and machinery of the Pennsylvania Company, and was constructed in Altoona. The new machine will be kept on the West Chester branch so that its workings can be closely watched.—Philadelphia Record.

ONE doctor Lamson, an American, was executed in London on Friday morning last for the crime of murder. He was financially embarrassed. He had a sickly brother-in-law in the event of whose death his wife would come into a small fortune. The boy suddenly died. Dr. Lamson fled to Paris, but on hearing through the papers that he was suspected and the officers were in search of him, returned to London, surrendered himself and announced his innocence. He was tried and swiftly condemned, the evidence that the young man had died of poison being overwhelming. Afterwards it was discovered that he had some distinguished relatives in this county and a desperate attempt was made to save him A number of affidavits were made to show his insanity and hurriedly sent to England. Twice the prisoner was respited, but in the end his sentence was affirmed and he is now in eternity.

—Frank McManus, a tramp from Boston, enticed the four-year-old daughter of J. P. Spear, of Minneapolis, Minn., to the suburbs on Thursday and there ill-treated her. The child was carried to her home in a dying condition and McManus was lodged in jail. About 1 o'clock next morning a party of masked men appeared at the jail and demanded his surrender. The Sheriff was made a prisoner and the mob then made a thorough search of the jail, breaking open cell doors until they found McManus. He was taken to Mr. Spear's house, where he was fully identified. Without further ceremony the mob took him to a large tree in front of the High School building and hanged him from a limb at 4.15 o'clock A. M. He did not express any fear after confessing his crime, and asked one of his executioners to convey a message to his mother in Boston. The child has a doubtful chance of recovery.

OUTRAGE AND ROBBERY AT GREENSBURG.—A Greensburg dispatch to the Pittsburg Chronicle, dated Tuesday last, says: Last night about 11 o'clock the house of Mrs. Johnathan Stump, three miles in the country, was broken into by three masked men. The women were bound and gagged, and one of them strung up to the rafters in order to extort information in regard to where the money was secreted. Mary, the younger daughter, was brutally beaten, but all refused to give information. The burglars got about $300 and then escaped.

A VARIED PERFORMANCE.

Many wonder how Parker's Ginger Tonic can perform such varied cures, thinking it essence of ginger, when in fact it is made from many valuable medicines which act beneficially on every diseased organ.

—A strange calamity has befallen the sardine fishermen of Brittany. At all the ancient fishing towns along the French coast south of Brest the fishermen have for years obtained their livelihood from this picatorial industry. Suddenly and without any warning these fish have disappeared. The men got out in their boats as usual, but returned with empty nets. The sardines have deserted the shores of Brittany for other waters, but where they have gone is not known. —The smallest baby in the world was recently born in a mining camp at Candelaria, Nevada. The father is a miner and weighs 190 pounds. The mother is a stout, healthy woman, weighing perhaps 160 pounds. The child is a male, as perfectly formed as any human being can be, but upon its birth it only weighed eight ounces. Its face is about the size of a horse chestnut, and a ring worn on the little finger of its mother was easily slipped over its foot nearly up to the knee. In the opinion of the attending physician the child will live and prosper in good health, notwithstanding its diminutive proportions. The midget is so small that three of its size could play hide-and-seek in a cigar box.

A STARTLING CONFESSION.

AN AGENT OF THE COMMUNE DECLARES ON HIS DEATH-BED THAT THE PRINCE IMPERIAL WAS AMBUSHED IN ZULULAND.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—Shortly after the announcement of the death of the Prince Imperial in Africa, Napoleon Philippe Bonaparte came to San Francisco and visited this city, where he has relations. He was suffering from a pulmonary complaint, and was sent to a hospital, where he died recently. Before his death Berre made a startling confession to the physician in attendance. It was to the effect that the Prince Imperial was not slain by the Zulus in Africa, but murdered by agents of the Commune, who accompanied him to Zululand for that purpose. After the funeral the physician told the story to a reporter of the Chronicle, which in brief is as follows: Young Berre was an active member of the Paris Commune, the members of which were of opinion that the petted Prince of Corsican descent would encompass the ruin of France on his return to Zululand. What follows is from the lips of the self-confessed murderer:

The Republic must live or the Prince must die. We decided that the Republic must live. At the meeting of Communists which rendered the verdict there were representatives from the four great and patriotic cities of France and two Russian lovers of liberty, who, like ourselves, were exiles in England. When lots were drawn to decide on whom should fall the duty of saving the Republic, I was chosen for the post of honor, as it was called, and next day I started for Port Natal, with three tried associates.

Berre personated an artist in search of the sensational. Tonnelet and Valousky went to Dunbar with the Commissary Department of Lord Chelmsford's command and the other associate, who is yet alive, joined a company of horse. Several plans were decided on to carry out their murderous designs, but all miscarried. The confession continued:

At last the eventful day arrived. Lieutenant Carey made a reconnaissance with the Prince Imperial a little distance from camp. It was merely a pleasure trip. In the meantime we had enlisted a Kaffir camp follower who had been punished by Carey, and, under pretext that we desired to kill the Lieutenant, he joined us, and we went into ambush at a point near where the corpse of the Prince was found later on. They arrived in due season and off saddled near a few ruined huts.—We advanced with great caution till within thirty yards of the unsuspecting party. At that moment for action came. Carey caught the horse in the mealie grass and mounted, and the troopers stood ready for the order to mount. A moment more and they would have been in the saddle, when the Kaffir, seeing Carey turn his horse's head toward the ravine beyond the kraal, rose in the grass, with a savage exclamation of hatred, and leveled his rifle. The noise attracted the attention of the scout. The crack of the Kaffir's rifle followed the unexpected apparition and thoroughly demoralized the party. Thinking that they had fallen into a strong Zulu ambush, every man considered only his own safety. Carey clapped spurs to his horse and dashed into the ravine, followed by another bullet from the Kaffir's rifle. Several of the troopers, who had got only one foot in the stirrup, clung to the pommels of the saddles. One trooper failed to catch his horse, and the Prince, after hanging for a few moments to the holster of his saddle, fell back exhausted and was trampled by his horse.

The Prince struggled to his feet, but a blow from the butt of Tonnelett's pistol felled the poor lad to the earth, and we dispatched him with one of the Kaffir's assegai's. Tonnelet was for searching the corpse after the manner of the Zulus, but I forbade such a proceeding and merely stripped the body. Then closing the unhappy boy's eyes and wrenching his arms on his breast, we hastened away, and on the journey back to camp scattered his clothes and weapons through the grass.

The confession enters into the details of the tragedy, closing with the statement that both Tonnelet and Valousky perished at Isandula, and two months after the death of the Prince, Barre's other associate and himself returned to England.

—The dwelling-house of Mr. James McCloskey, in Gallitzin borough, was burned to the ground about the hour of noon on Wednesday last, but we did not learn the amount of the loss, which was total, there being no insurance. —The clothing department at Barkers' is simply immense. We had little idea of the amount of stock they carry until we gave it a looking over the other day, when we found it to consist of everything in that line which could possibly be desired no matter whether the tastes of the fancy young man or the older and more sedate, who prefer comfort to style, are to be suited. Hence the folly of going from home to buy clothing when you can get just as good wearing apparel at Barkers' and save your railroad fare at least.

—The trial of Michael Murphy, who is charged with having murdered his wife last December at Shaw's Run, on the Bell's Gap railroad, an account of which we published at the time, was commenced in the Blair county Court on Friday last. Judge Dean delivered his charge on Tuesday afternoon to the jury, which then retired, and if we learn the result before our paper goes to press this (Thursday) forenoon we will give it in a postscript. P. S.—A telegram informs us that the jury returned a verdict Wednesday morning of murder in the second degree.

—After all the mysterious movements which characterized the progress through this section last summer of the various corps of engineers who were engaged in surveying routes for a new railroad, the information reaches us that said road will in all probability pass through Fulton, Bedford and other counties between Chambersburg and Pittsburg, thus leaving us out in the cold, as usual. The only hope now seems to be the extension of our branch road to the Blackliek region, and the prospects in that direction, like certain brands of flour, range from fair to middling.

—The many friends of Mr. John Gels and his son William, the former of Johnstown and the latter of Salina, Kansas, where for several years they did a large banking business, will be pleased to learn that they are about through with the difficulties in which for three years ago compelled them to make an assignment. This gratifying information is furnished by the Salina Journal of last week, which also says that on the day that paper was published the firm of John Gels & Co. commenced paying an additional instalment of 12 per cent. on their indebtedness, and that only ten per cent. yet remains to be paid to liquidate all their liabilities.

—Our worthy young friend and patron, Robert T. Shields, who for several months past has been a salesman in the extensive clothing house of Godfrey Wolf, Altoona, has returned to Loretto, where he was born and brought up, and embarked in the mercantile business, with, we hope, every assurance of success. Bob has the necessary energy and business tact to make the thing go, but if he calls to his aid a fair share of printer's ink, judiciously applied, he may rest assured that things will run a great deal smoother. And don't let him or anybody else forget that we are prepared to do advertising and job work in the best style and at the lowest prices.

—The Carrolltown News says that the account published in the FREEMAN two weeks ago of the bold robbery perpetrated in Carroll township on the Tuesday night previous is "too thin," but until that paper points out the alleged attenuation in said story we are fully justified in considering it a clear case of sour grapes. We know that such a robbery took place at the time stated, Mr. Jacob Zern, the victim, as well as one of his nearest neighbors, having so informed us, the latter previous to and the former a few days after the account appeared in our paper, and while we may and probably did err in a few minor particulars, the main facts were as we gave them, and we defy the News to show anything to the contrary.

—A German named Casper Zink stole twenty-seven dollars and a suit of clothes from one of the inmates of Mr. J. C. Martin's boarding house at Portage, this county, about ten days ago, and Constable Westbrook, having learned of his departure in the direction of Philadelphia, a telegram was sent to that city and he was arrested there the latter part of last week. Constable W. went down and brought the accused back to Portage, where a hearing was granted him by Esq. Burgoon on Saturday. Being unable to procure bail, he was brought here and consigned to a cell in the county prison. It is said that he has admitted his guilt. Casper will have saddled a nice bill of costs on the county by the time he is delivered to the warden of the Western Penitentiary.

—In the Somerset county Court last week, the publishers of the Pittsburg Commercial were convicted of libel upon Gen. Coffroth. The matter complained of by Gen. C. was contained in a letter of a Washington correspondent of the Commercial, reflecting on the conduct of that gallant defendant as chairman of the Committee on Pensions when he was in Congress. The defendants offered to show as a defense that the information charged as libellous was furnished their correspondent by General Campbell, Gen. Coffroth's successor, but the evidence was not admitted by the Court. The Gallitzin defendants' counsel made a motion for a new trial. The trial of the indictment against the Johnstown Tribune for republishing the letter as it appeared in the Commercial was continued until the August term of court on account of the death of a sister of the editor.

—The Hollidaysburg correspondent of the Altoona Tribune says that on Thursday last a dirty, ragged, red-faced little woman, carrying a five-months-old babe and leading by the hand a four-year-old boy, went through that town begging money to take her and her children, as she said, to Johnstown. It being show day, she gathered in quite a lot of pennies, which were duly handed over to a drunken, degraded man. The money, as a matter of course, was spent for liquor, and the man, woman and children laid out all night and to 4 o'clock next morning, when they were all taken to the Blair county almshouse. The little boy was so near dead that he was unable to stand, and the innocent babe was almost in a dying condition. The drunken man and woman should have been sent to jail instead of the almshouse. It will be a burning shame if the authorities permit the degraded couple to again get possession of their suffering, innocent children to use as a means to beg money to purchase whiskey.

—A craggy woman named Gregory made his escape from the county almshouse last Tuesday afternoon, and coming to town, created something of a sensation. After prowling round for a time he repaired to a point near the railroad station, where he acted in a manner peculiar to the insane. The appearance of the woman became alarmed at his unseemly antics, whereupon Conductor Snyder, who was near by, put him nolens volens under arrest. Deputy Sheriff Web. Griffith came round about this time, and between the efforts of the Conductor and the Deputy, ably assisted by all the boys living within a radius of a half mile, Gregory was safely escorted to jail for safe keeping. Steward Lilly had meantime discovered the flight of his boarder, and further along came with a wagon and took him back to his old quarters. There are several dangerous or mischievous insane persons in the almshouse, and it requires almost constant watchfulness to guard against one or more of them visiting us every day.

—The arbitration to which reference is made in another item as the first official business transacted in the New Court House was to determine a case of ejectment in which Dennis Sullivan, administrator of John Sullivan, late of Altoona, deceased, was plaintiff, and M. M. Miller, of Clearfield township, defendant, the latter being represented by A. V. Barker, Esq., and the latter by R. L. Johnston and T. R. Scanlan, Esqs., as counsel. The arbitrators were Messrs. John A. Blair, Alvin Evans and Ed. James, who decided that the defendant should pay the balance of the purchase money due on a lot bought by him from said decedent, amounting to about $1,100, within thirty days; failing in which the Court is to be asked to appoint a trustee to sell the land, and any surplus over and above said balance due arising from the sale, if any such surplus there should be, is to revert to the defendant as compensation for improvements made or value added to the land while in his possession.

—We regret to learn from the Altoona Tribune that Mrs. Margaret Brallier, wife of Dr. Jacob L. Brallier, died suddenly at the Logan House, in that city, on last Saturday morning. The Doctor, who is almost constantly on his travels as salesman for a large drug establishment in Philadelphia, brought his wife to the Logan House about two years ago, where she continued to board up until her death. About two weeks ago she was taken suddenly ill with what was pronounced by her physician to be paralysis of the heart, and her husband was immediately summoned. On Friday it was thought that she was in a fair way to recover, but on Saturday morning, while her husband and his brother, Dr. Em'l Brallier, of Chambersburg, were at the breakfast table, a messenger announced to them that Mrs. Brallier was dead. The deceased was about 45 years of age and was born, we believe, in Lewisburg, Union county, to which place her remains were taken on the 6.45 train Saturday evening. Mrs. B. was an accomplished and pleasant lady, and during her residence in Altoona had drawn around her hosts of friends. She had no children. Her husband, who was born and reared in this county, where he is well and most favorably known, is the recipient of sincere sympathy in his sudden and severe bereavement.

—One of the three children of the Roberts family (colored), of this place, whom we noticed last week as having been stricken down by small-pox, died on last Friday evening. The victim was an adopted daughter, named Alice, aged about 9 years, and her case was pronounced one of the most virulent of its class. Dr. Kennedy was the attending physician, and on him and Mr. Morgan Hughes devolved absolutely the unpleasant task of conveying the body to the Catholic cemetery for interment. Not only that, but the house occupied by Mrs. Roberts, confined the remains and did every thing else required in such an emergency. For this charitable act, Dr. Kennedy, who, though a comparatively new comer in our town, has taken high rank in his profession, is entitled and receives the encomiums of the entire community, while his assistant comes in for similar praise. The two other children of the family afflicted with the loathsome disease are apparently convalescing, and will no doubt get well unless congestion of the lungs or something of that kind intervenes. Thanks to the prompt sanitary measures taken by the borough authorities, and thanks especially to our worthy Burgess, Mr. C. T. Roberts, the plague has been confined to the afflicted household, and fears that it would or might become epidemic are happily dissipated.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A YOUNG EBENSBURG LADY.—Miss Kate Evans, daughter of Mr. Evan E. Evans, constable of the East ward, and granddaughter of Mr. Jacob Thomas, merchant, of the same ward, died very suddenly of hemorrhage of the lungs on last Tuesday afternoon, aged about 17 years. She was in delicate health from infancy, being a victim of consumption, but was well enough on Sunday to attend church and Sabbath school, and we believe continued in that condition up until a few minutes before her death, which was so sudden and unexpected that the physician who was summoned hadn't time to reach the house, much less render any assistance to the dying girl. The deceased was a most estimable young lady, and her early and unlooked for death will be greatly regretted by a large circle of admiring friends and acquaintances.

The bereaved parents and other relatives of the young lady so unexpectedly summoned to another and we hope a better world have the sincere sympathy of the entire community in the sad and sudden bereavement which has come upon them.

DEATH OF FRANCIS P. TIERNEY, ESQ.—A brief telegram was received here this (Thursday) forenoon announcing the unexpected and deeply to be regretted death at his home in Altoona of F. P. Tierney, Esq., a former citizen of this place and a gentleman well known to nearly everybody in Cambria county. The deceased was a very successful lawyer and had hosts of warm friends, here and elsewhere, who will be sorry indeed to learn of his unlooked for death in the very prime of life. His age we presume to have been about 45 years. He leaves a wife and four or five children. May God grant rest to his soul and consolation to his bereaved family.

SCIPIO, N. Y., Dec. 1, 1879.—I am the pastor of the Baptist Church here, and an educated physician. I am not in practice, but am my sole family physician, and advise in many chronic cases. Over a year ago I recommended your Hop Bitters to my invalid wife, who has been under medical treatment of six of Albany's best physicians several years. She has became thoroughly cured of her various complicated diseases by their use. We both recommend them to our friends, many of whom have also been cured of their various ailments by them.

LETTER FROM MINNESOTA.

HASTINGS, Minn., April 20, 1882.

FRIEND MAC—It is now more than four years since I bade adieu to Cambria and turned my face toward the setting sun in hopes to find a land of promise, for

> "There's a country famed history,
> As you've often times been told;
> 'Tis a land of mighty rivers
> Running over sands of gold—
> The abode of peace and plenty,
> And with quietness 'tis blest,
> But this land that is so famous
> Is away off in the West."

So to seek this land of promise we commenced our journey westward on April 9th, 1878, in company with Messrs. P. M. & W. J. Woleslagle, of Wilmore, and Robert McCauliff, of Somerset. After a pleasant journey we arrived safely at our destination, Fort Scott, Kansas, where we parted company with Messrs. Woleslagle, they going to Girard, while Mr. McCauliff and myself started for St. Mary's. Mr. Woleslagle soon tired of Kansas, as we expected he would, for he was so anxious to reach his destination that the train traveled entirely too slow for him. He was desirous to reach home, as he termed it, and expected to find a land where the rivers flowed with honey and the banks were lined with gingerbread; but he was badly disappointed. We found in Kansas many old friends, among them Mr. Jacob Stiffler and S. P. Donmyer, of New Cambria, and Messrs. Berg, of Salina, who by family we welcomed to the front, and taking a fond farewell of his charming young bride he entered the service. He was engaged in several fierce and bloody battles, and finally word was received by his wife that he had been killed in the battle of Antietam. The young wife's heart was bowed down with the grief of a widow's sorrows, and for a time after the receipt of the news of her husband's death on the field of battle her own life was despaired of, for the terrible announcement came when she needed more than at any other the tender presence of husband and protector, but after a month's suffering upon a bed of agony, during which she was carried to the very brink of the dark river of death, she began to recover, and a few months later found her up and about, though the mother of a supposed fatherless boy. To her inexpressible joy the sorrowing widow greeted her time and that affection and care which only a true mother knows how to extend.

Months became years, and the young widow continued to mourn the tragic death of the brave husband and father. Finally, however, a masculine admirer crossed her path, and in due course of time she was persuaded to cast off the weeds of widowhood and marry her persistent but honorable suitor.

A quiet but happy wedding followed, and soon thereafter the new husband and father, and her little son accompanied the new husband and father to the west, finally settling in Red Oak, Montgomery county, Iowa, the gentleman engaged in business and the family continued to reside for some years. In the natural order of things the family multiplied until it numbered, in addition to the husband, wife and eldest son, who is now a young man engaged in business for himself, four other children, two sons and two handsome daughters. The family lived happily, and the younger brothers and sisters grew to manhood and womanhood, the mother meantime mourning for her soldier husband as only a woman in a second marital relationship would be apt to mourn.

A few days ago there appeared in Red Oak a gentleman of middle age and of fine and rather attractive bearing. Calling on a business man there with whom he was acquainted, he inquired as to the whereabouts of the family referred to, and was shown their place of residence. He was also informed in reply to inquiries as to their condition in life, the number of the family, and the fact that the son of the wife by a former husband had gone into business for himself in the employ of a firm in Huntingdon. As Josie Bell quietly installed the face of the new arrival, and bidding his Red Oak friend farewell, he departed. His next stop was in Council Bluffs, where he yesterday met another acquaintance whom he had known in boyhood days in the east. To this friend he told his story. The visitor was none other than the "soldier husband," whose "widow" was now the wife of another man and the mother of another man's children. Learning of her happiness, he did not feel disposed to make his identity known, preferring to leave matters as they now exist rather than visit his wife or permit her to know that he is still alive, though in the excitement of the war he was by mistake reported killed. What he may do nobody knows, but probably he will make himself known for the purpose of claiming his boy, and then leave the innocent victim of a "double marriage" undisturbed in her present family relations, knowing, as he does, that she consented to marry again only after a reasonable season of supposed widowhood, and not until she felt assured that her first husband had fallen a victim of a cruel rebellion which resulted in making so many strange incidents, of which this is one.

As an explanation of the long absence of husband No. 1, it is said that he left the army shattered in constitution, from the effects of a long imprisonment in the hell-hole at Andersonville, and was also temporarily deprived of reason. He drifted aimlessly about the country, forgetting by reason of the clouded condition of his mind, where he lived, who he was, or where he was going. He finally wandered to Utica, N. Y., where he was placed by Masonic friends, who recognized in him a member of the order, in the asylum there for the insane and feeble-minded. In a few years he recovered and was dismissed, clear in mind and active in body. Then he began a search for his wife, but as nearly ten years had elapsed, and she had remarried and left the country, he found that no one in Altoona knew whither she had gone with husband No. 2, and after years of inquiry and writing he learned only a few weeks ago of their present whereabouts and the true state of affairs, and only with a view of looking after his son did he follow the wife of his younger days to the western home of herself and her new husband.

For obvious reasons the names of all the parties to this drama are withheld.

SUMMONS IN EJECTMENT.—The Johnstown Tribune says that on Saturday last Deputy-Sheriff Kinkead summoned the Cambria Iron Company, the Gautler Steel Company (limited) and the Johnstown Manufacturing Company to be and appear before the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas of Cambria county, on the first Monday of June next, to answer a certain complaint made by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to the effect that the above-named corporations now have in their actual possession lots of ground situated in Conemaugh borough, Conemaugh township and Franklin borough, comprised in the property of the old Portage Railroad, which the Pennsylvania Central claims to have and to hold by right of purchase from the commonwealth. The property in dispute begins at the point in the centre line of the old Portage Railroad where the north line of Church street, in Conemaugh borough, which runs from Railroad street in a south easterly direction to Johnstown borough, would intersect the same, if prolonged, and thence continues to the east end of the old tunnel, at the head of Plane No. 1—a distance of about four miles. Sixty-one and a half acres are contained within the boundaries given, and the property is very valuable. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company claims that the title to this ground is in it, and not in the said defendants, which fact it avers it is prepared to prove at the proper time.

TWO STORY BIRDS' NESTS.

While the expanding leaves of trees and shrubs retain the tender tints of pink, and the broad lily pads commence to mosiac the surface of the ponds with green, in perfect harmony with the bursting bud and opening flower comes the summer yellow-bird, and from hedge and bush may be heard his song, as simple and pleasing as the tasteful but modest plumage that covers his little person. Almost immediately after the first appearance of the industrious little birds they commence their preparations for housekeeping. The male bird flies busily about selecting such material as feathers, plants, fibres, the furze from ferns, the catkins from willows, and other similar objects, all of which he he brings to his mate, who arranges and fashions their delicate nest. So quickly and deftly do this little couple labor that they build a greater part of their house in a single day.

There is often a third party interested in the construction of this nest, a homeless happy-go-lucky Bohemian bird, who has a tramp's interest in the housekeeping arrangements of most of the smaller feathered denizens of copse and woods. This is the well-known cow-blackbird, who distains to shackle her freedom with the care of a family, and shifts a mother's responsibility by farming her progeny out, while she seeks the incongruous but apparently congenial companionship of the cattle, with whom she appears to be on the most intimate terms.

The cow-blackbird deposits its eggs indiscriminately among the nests of smaller birds. The blackbird's eggs generally hatch out a day or two sooner than the adopted mother's own eggs, so, when the legitimate members of the family do come, it is to find their nest already occupied by the strong, lusty interlopers, who, on account of their superior size and strength, come in for the lion's share of food brought to the nest. Thus the innocent parents rear the aliens, while their own young starve, It is really a pitiable sight to see a couple of little greenlets searching from daybreak till evening for food to fill the capacious crop of one or more young cow-blackbirds, considerably larger than themselves.

The summer yellow-birds, though confiding little creatures, are not readily duped or imposed upon. Their instinct is sufficiently near reason for them to detect the difference between their own little fragile, prettily-marked, greenish colored eggs, and the great dark-colored ones the vagabond cow-blackbird has surreptitiously smuggled into the cosy nest. The domestic little couple cling to the spot selected for their house and will not leave it, neither will they hatch the obnoxious eggs, which they are apparently unable to throw out; but the difficulty is soon surmounted, and so are the gratuitous eggs, for the indefatigable workers proceed at once to cover up the cow-blackbird's eggs, constructing a new nest on top of the old one, building a second story, as it were, to their house.

Last summer Mr. Lang Gibson found one of these two-story nests at Flushing, L. I. The lower nests had two cow-blackbird's eggs, and the upper one three eggs of the summer yellow-bird, Gibson watched the construction of the nest. Sometime afterwards, to his surprise, he found the nest contained three eggs of the yellowbird and no signs of the existence of those deposited by the blackbird, but the nest had the appearance of being much taller than at first, and an examination disclosed the true facts of the case.

Mr. Nuttal was the first naturalist to record the observation of two-story bird nests. Mr. Baird mentions a three story nest, each of the lower nests containing the eggs of the cow-blackbird, the whole structure being seven inches high.

BOILING BROTH IN THE ANDES.—In Byram's "Wanderings in Chili and Peru," we find the following remarkable illustration of one of the well known laws of heat: Feeling very cold we determined to have some soup to warm us and having plenty of meat and onions, we cut them up, put them into a saucepan, with salt and Cayenne pepper, and set them on to boil. I only relate this for the information of those who have not been to great heights, those who wish to go there, and also of those who, perchance, may believe that boiling is the same thing the world over. After our soup had bubbled away in the most orthodox style for about two hours, we naturally concluded that our "bouillion" was ready and the meat perfectly done, especially as the last had been cut into rather small pieces; but, to our great surprise, we found the water almost colorless, and the meat almost as raw as when it was first put into the pot. One of the miners told us that it was no use trying to boil anything, as nothing could be cooked with water from the top of that mountain; for, although the water bubbled away very fast, the heat was not great enough to boil a potato.

At great altitudes the water begins to boil long before it arrives at the heat of 212 degrees of Fahrenheit, and as water cannot be hotter than the boiling point, except by the compression of the steam, nothing can be cooked unless some safe means of confining the steam be adopted. I saw directly how matters lay, and, sticking the lid tight on the pan, made it tight with heavy lumps of silver that were lying about, attaching them to the handle, and putting others on the top of all. In a very short time the steam got up, and, though it made the lid jump a little, I managed to get a broth, to the great surprise of the miners, who could not conceive what I was about.

THE BORACIC ACID TREATMENT OF DIPHTHERIA.—Dr. T. D. Harris, of Aberystwith, reports in the Lancet a very successful treatment of diphtheria by the local application of boracic acid in solution. The solution is prepared and applied as follows:

Boracic acid, two drachms; glycerine, half an ounce—to be applied freely to the fauces at first, diminishing in frequency with the disappearance of the deposit and general symptoms. The plication should be continued for some days after the throat has become perfectly clean. If discontinued too abruptly, the deposit is almost certain to reform, with a return of the general symptoms; and with a view of warding off this danger, I make it a rule to continue painting up to the eighth day, after which day the patient may be considered comparatively safe. The solution seems to have no injurious effect when swallowed, as I have frequently applied an ounce during twenty-four hours in the cases of children of from four to five years of age.

THE Troy Press tells of a farmer who has tried a remedy for potato bugs with success. He procured a number of boards and placed here and there among his potatoes, and on these boards were placed a few raw potatoes sliced. At noon on the first day of his experiment he and his hired men found every piece of potato covered with bugs. The men killed this crop, and at night another crop was killed, though not so large, and in a week's time not a bug could be seen, and his trouble with bugs after that was comparatively small. In the spring, he says, is the best time to attend to the bugs, as a spring bug breeds from 200 to 600 during the season. He thinks it would be a good plan to dip the potato in paris green, as it would save the work of killing them.

PERUNA is a wonder in itself. It cures the most hopeless cases of consumption.
